THE following from the Hawesville Plaindcaler is very suggestive:

"As the railroad is a fixed fact, it is well t burn up your benches and stand up awhile, if you don't intend to hustle. The time has sed for sitting around and whittling."

A town without a railroad may lead a very quiet and peaceful existence, but it misses all of the stir and activity that characterizes the business world of to-day. His withdrawal is somewhat a surprise, and there will be a great deal of curiosity to know his reason for abolishing the context. He certainly had a good chance to be nominated. With Hill out of the fight, and Gen. Buckner at the head of the tiexet, the nomination for second place will almost certainly go to Jim Bryan or to Tom Hazelrigg, as his mountain friends call him. Central Kentucky, which would have given Hill a big vote, will now fall into line for Bryan.
